

JENGA Collection - designed by Studio Salaris

Jenga is a collection of tables and stools inspired by the traditional stackable wooden games and in the Swahili language means “build!”: a name perfect for a collection of tables with an original design, where the sculptural and minimal shapes, carved into the material, are nothing more than a repetition of modules that overlap rhythmically. These Suar side tables with an oiled finishing recall the idea of the Jenga game that names the collection: solid, robust and absolutely unique.

Studio Salaris

Studio Salaris was born in the historic centre of Milan, capital of design.

Founder Alessandra Salaris topped her classical education with the study of interior design in London and Milan, where she attended IED and graduated from Politecnico di Milano. She later earned a Masters degree in Marketing and Communication to better understand the challenges of the business she faces everyday. As of today, she has worked internationally.

In the past decade she has collaborated with the top magazines and companies of the industry.

Her ambition has always been that of delivering a customized support to help her clients achieve an aesthetic expression of their brands.

Her mission is to give a personal and recognizable contribution that enhances the clients' story and core values.
